From the Cumberland Army.

CAMP SILE, March 13, 1863.

Mr. Editor:—The Army of the Cumberland is active and the rebels are painfully sensible of the fact that war is upon them. Expeditions are constantly harassing the enemy's lines, and but few are now found north of McMinnville, Shelbyville and Columbia. The "hera brigade" as Willich's Brigade is called, made a brilliant dash a few days since, led by the heroic Jones, of the 39th Indiana. They made near forty miles through mud, water and rain, driving the rebels from Middleburg by an impetuous charge, killing nine, wounding seventeen, and capturing six rebels; and brought in a large amount of supplies, without the loss of a man, and having only one wounded.

Scores of prisoners are captured daily, and trains of cars go to Nashville loaded with them. General Rosecrans is organizing a Legion of Honor, which will consist of near 6,000 men, chosen for skill, courage and dashing heroism. As soon as practicable, they will be mounted, and if backed by the Government, this will be made the most magnificent body of men ever marshalled on the continent. They will be commanded by officers selected from the roll of honor, and most distinguished for good conduct and gallantry.

General Rosecrans grows in favor with the army. He is a man of details and knows how to excite and maintain the zeal and enthusiasm of his splendid army. Regardless of popular clamor, he will move when ready, and if allowed to pursue his own plans, he will drive all before him.

General McCook is fat, jolly and popular as ever. Always vigilant, brave and heroic; he believes in fighting rebels wherever found, until peace is conquered with honor.

General Johnson still leads the 2d Division, and no man is more popular. The slang and slanders of the press and correspondents, have served to elevate him in the opinion of his men. He is loyal, accomplished, and cordial in supporting the Government, and merits as much of public confidence as any man in the field. The officers of his Division have asked that he be continued in command, and urged his promotion. Let loyal men at home be careful how they assail officers in the field, and also how they speak of the war, and things will go on well in the army.

This army is not demoralized, but earnest and determined as ever. Let the public have faith that the right will triumph. Fill up the old regiments with conscripts, and give us an army of 200,000 in reserve, organized from conscripts. In this way the war can be closed by next fall. The cry of "peace" is cowardly, and unworthy of the American. We must fight until the rebels yield or are destroyed.

General Rosecrans has ordered all rebel families and all whose fathers and husbands are in the rebel service, and all who sympathize with the traitors, to go South, where they must live or die with their natural supporters. This order is right and will be enforced. The rebels adopt this policy. So must we. Let demagogues howl at home, but rest assured that the rebels will be made to feel all the pinching, crushing, killing horrors of war. Daily, Union families rush to our lines, driven from their homes by the orders of Bragg and his associates. We will give them the homes vacated by rebel families driven beyond our lines.

No man will be allowed to remain inside of our lines unless he is an out-spoken Union man, or will take the oath and give ample bonds for good conduct. Your readers will remember that this was the policy proclaimed by Col. Gimeson as early as May, 1861, and his rising reputation in the army, is partly owing to the fact that his position was known long since, and is now being adopted. To this policy the whole country will come. The Democratic party will become the champions of a vigorous war policy, and unless timid Republicans are more resolute, they will be swept from power.

Col. Gimeson publicly predicted in 1861, that, as the last desperate effort, the rebels would arm the slave, and give freedom to the negro upon condition that southern independence was secured by this cooperation. He is being armed, and our heroic white soldiers are bound to fight the property of southern rebels, of which sycophants at home are so careful. Shall the patriot be quiet and cry "peace," whilst negroes and their masters are arming to batter down the pillars of the Republic?

MONROE.

Just like him. He is always resorting to something that is contemptible and sneaking.

[CORRESPONDENCE OF TIFFIN TRIBUNE.]

From the 14th O. V. I.

The following preamble and resolutions were adopted by the (14th) squad, of Co. H, 14th Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry:

WHEREAS, It has from time to time come to the knowledge of its soldiers of our army, that certain designing, traitorous politicians of the North have exerted themselves to their utmost capacity, to prejudice our friends of the loyal states against the government of the United States, the constitutional authorities and army thereof; and have by sending treasonable publications to the soldiers, and by various other means tried to discourage the soldiers, and demoralize the army; and have by many other acts aided and abetted in the existing rebellion, and given support to the enemies of our nation—their comrades in treason. And whereas, those persons have, by falsehoods and other dishonorable means, tried to make it appear that we, the soldiers of the Union are also traitors, and are wishing for peace on the dishonorable terms of disunion.

WHEREAS, Those designing and treasonable persons have expressed doubts concerning the truth of the sentiments expressed in the recent resolutions and appeals which we, the soldiers of Ohio in the Department of the Cumberland have recently sent home to our friends, they pretending that these resolutions were merely the echoes of the power-loving officers, and did not contain the sentiments of the soldiers. And whereas, we considered it to be of great importance that our friends shall understand exactly what our sentiments really are, and what we will carry out by the force of arms.

Resolved, Therefore that we, the undersigned members of Co. H, 14th Regiment Ohio Volunteers, and formerly citizens of Attica, Seneca County, Ohio, and the surrounding vicinity, consider it to be our imperative duty to write home to our friends our real sentiments in regard to the present affairs of our nation which we now attempt to do. We have heretofore fully endorsed public measures which have been sent home directly to the public, but we now send to our special friends these resolutions and to them we will attach our signatures to attest that they are our own.

Resolved, That we stand firm as ever for the Union, and that we consider it a duty that we owe to ourselves, to our nation, and to the general cause of free government to fight armed rebellion abroad and to our friends at home.

Resolved, That we recognize in Abraham Lincoln, the constitutionally elected and empowered President of the United States, and commander-in-chief of the Armies and Navies thereof; and consider it to be our duty to carry out such measures as he shall deem expedient in putting down the rebellion, and shall in all things look to him as our leader so long as armed rebellion shall continue.

Resolved, That we recognize in Abraham Lincoln, the constitutionally elected and empowered President of the United States, and commander-in-chief of the Armies and Navies thereof; and consider it to be our duty to carry out such measures as he shall deem expedient in putting down the rebellion, and shall in all things look to him as our leader so long as armed rebellion shall continue.

Resolved, That we consider the proclamation of the President on the subject of slavery, will be carried into effect, tend to weaken our foes and thus shorten the war, and to settle the political differences between the North and South, and to thus lay the basis of permanent peace; and that from these considerations we regard said proclamation as an expedient measure.

Resolved, That we welcome the Constitution law as an appropriate and a needed measure, for it will certainly tell powerfully upon our foes to their strength, and we will insure a speedy peace.

Resolved, That we consider those who discourage enlistments, encourage a resistance to a draft, urge an armistice, and in raising a meeting against the President, or urge peace on any terms save those of the restoration of the Union, and the full surrender of the rebels to our army, is to be enemies of our nation, and we shall treat them as such.

Resolved, That we think them by far less honorable when we find them north, disguised as friends, than when they dare to face us on the field of battle.

Resolved, That we consider it the duty of our friends in the North to give us their full and ardent support, and to put down treason there by force of arms if necessary. That such as fail to do this are our enemies, and shall treat them as such, and shall remember them with a vengeance when we return from the field. If it comes to the worst we are willing to carry the war into Ohio, and there fight home rebels—our former friends and neighbors, if need be. We repeat the enemies of our country are our enemies, and no matter what lies of friendship, or of blood may have existed between them and us, they are now our deadly foes.

Resolved, That we consider these resolutions to embody the sentiments of a great majority of this army, yet we admit that there are among us a few cowardly, home-sick, fault-finding beings, who bear the physical mould of men, who gladly feign political scruples to get freed from doing their duty as soldiers. But thank Heaven, they are but few.

[CORRESPONDENCE OF TIFFIN TRIBUNE.]

FROM THE 34th O. V. I.

The following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted by Co. D, 34th Regiment O. V. I. (1st Ohio Zouaves) at Fayetteville, Va., March 9th, 1863:

WHEREAS, Our country is at war with rebels, and her overthrow is imminent, and as we have come forth at our country's call to battle for her rights—her constitution, and the maintenance of her flag, and as we now behold in the North a spirit arising that every patriot—every true American, can but look upon with contempt, and as suicidal to the best interests of the people, and embroiling of the rights and equalities of the States; the tendency of which is to thwart and paralyze the government in its efforts to suppress this wicked and senseless rebellion; which has been inaugurated by a few southern oligarchies and autocrats to destroy the noble inheritance bequeathed to us by our fathers, and to rear in its stead a government, the chief corner stone of which was to have been slavery, with a view of extending the same over all the western territories; the result of which would be the eternal destruction of our republic, in blighting forever the last fond hope of mankind in saying to the world that man with all his boasted powers is not capable of self-government. And whereas, there are unprincipled and disloyal persons in the North who are exerting themselves to the utmost of their ability, in aiding those in arms against the government, in tendering them their sympathies, pecuniary aid, and crying peace, compromise, and the like, while the rebels themselves have obstinately and repeatedly told us they will never compromise, leaving us no means of reconstructing the Union, but by coercion and subjugation. Therefore, we feel it a duty we owe to ourselves that we publicly denounce, reproach, and contemptuously scorn all these black-hearted northern traitors. Therefore be it

Resolved, 1st, That we deny our traitorous enemies at home any rights to claim the sacred name of Democracy. We are glad to know that the true doctrine is now ever true to the interests of the people; and that it is a duty we owe to ourselves that we publicly denounce, reproach, and contemptuously scorn all these black-hearted northern traitors.
